

Mississippi Parents for Vaccine Rights (MPVR) supports the basic human right of parents to be the final authority in their children's vaccinations. We are focused on defending freedom of religion and conscience in vaccine decision-making for all.

WHY A RELIGIOUS EXEMPTION?

- Facts the US Constitution demand that Mississippians have religious freedom in vaccine decision-making. Mississippi parents want and deserve the same rights afforded in all Mississippi's bordering states. 48 other healthier states, have had religious exemptions to vaccines for DECADES, since vaccine mandates began.
- Mississippi's vaccine laws violate the religious freedom of parents who prayerfully, carefully make healthcare decisions for their children. If a MS parent feels led by God to select, delay, or withhold vaccines for their child, our state government prevents them from following God's lead.
- Mississippi's vaccine laws violate *The Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 2014, by "the most restrictive means."
- Both development and manufacture of live virus vaccines have, so far, required the organs and tissues of over 80 aborted babies. New cell lines for vaccine production are now being developed using water bag born alive abortions in China.
- 50+ Mississippi infants have been reported to have died following routine immunizations according to the US Health and Human Services.
- Contrary to current propaganda, relaxing Mississippi's draconian vaccine laws would NOT be "bad for public health." In fact, other states in the nation whose children are healthier than MS's have had religious exemptions for decades, since vaccine mandates began.
- MS's vaccine laws are so restrictive that large numbers of educated families are steadily leaving the state, taking their bright children and tax dollars with them. Families nationwide looking to transfer to Mississippi to work are not moving here where they will lose the religious freedom of vaccine decision-making.

• Drug companies and healthcare providers are protected from liability by federal law if a child is injured or killed by a vaccine. When a child is vaccinated, the only liability is with the health and well-being of the child.

- Drug companies that produce our childhood vaccines are the biggest defrauders of the federal government under the False Claims Act, paying $38.6 billion in penalties from 1991 through 2017.

Speak out on behalf of the voiceless and for the rights of all who are vulnerable.
